Meeting the challenges of Agriculture and Forestry with Commissioner Bob Odom

In response to what has been called a meteoric rise in the amount of catfish being imported into the United States, the Louisiana Legislature, at the urging of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Bob Odom, passed a bill in the last legislative session aimed at protecting the state's catfish producers.

Since 1999, catfish imports have skyrocketed in the United States with 7 million pounds imported in 2000, an increase of 5 million pounds from the previous year. The National Marine Fisheries reports that as of April 2001, 1.2 million pounds of catfish had been imported compared to 600,000 pounds during the same time period last year.

Senator Noble Ellington's bill, which was signed by Gov. Mike Foster last month, limits the use of the words "farm-raised" and "aquaculture" on boxes of imported catfish. The bill also requires that boxes be marked as a "product of" their country of origin.

"More than 90 percent of the catfish entering the U.S. is from Vietnam, and their means of producing catfish does not meet our definition for farm-raised aquaculture. On top of that, we don't know what's in the rivers they're growing these fish in," Odom explained.

"We want the fish labeled 'Product of Vietnam,' or whatever country it may be from, because consumers have the right to know where the catfish they're eating was produced. We also want to make consumers aware that this catfish is not even from the same family as our catfish."

American catfish producers say imports have flooded the market in recent years and taken as much as 10 percent of their business nationwide while lowering the farm price for U.S. catfish by 10 to 15 cents per pound. The Vietnamese catfish product is selling for about $1 per pound less than American catfish.

"All indications are that the quantities of imported Vietnamese catfish will only continue to increase," Odom said.

In Louisiana, there are nearly 120 catfish farmers who produced 67 million pounds of catfish on some 14,000 acres last year. The gross farm value of their product was more than $47.8 million.

Odom also noted that Arkansas passed new legislation recently requiring restaurants to identify catfish as Vietnamese or any other origin not in the United States.

"There are tools that must be implemented to protect our American catfish producers, and what's been done in Louisiana and Arkansas are good starting points," he said. "But we can't stop here, we've got to continue monitoring these imports and passing legislation that will save the industry."

Professional golfer Phil Mickelson (right) accepts a second serving of Alligator Sauce Picante from Louisiana Department of Agriculture & Forestry employee Todd Thompson (left) at the recent Compaq Classic in New Orleans. The promotion was sponsored by the Louisiana Alligator Farmers and Rancher's Association and the LDAF to develop new markets for alligator meat. The dish, prepared by Ralph & Kacoo's Restaurant, was one of many Louisiana traditional dishes served on the Pro-Am day. The alligator meat was donated by Circle "M" Ranch, Hammond, Louisiana.

Louisiana Hosts National Meetings for Crop Insurance Pilot Program

Louisiana is host to three of 34 national meetings to develop a cost of production crop insurance pilot program, Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Bob Odom said recently.

The final of the three meetings will be held from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m., Sept. 6 at the LSU Rice Research Station in Crowley, for rice producers. The meeting for cotton producers was held Aug. 20 in Winnsboro, and sugarcane producers met Aug. 21 in Bayou Vista.

"This is a program developed for producers by producers and we want their input in creating a program that is suitable to their needs," Odom said. "Everyone working on the cost of production pilot program believes it will finally offer producers a true safety net in terms of crop insurance."

Odom began spearheading the national drive to revamp crop insurance using a "cost of production" concept six years ago. Since then, he has been instrumental in hiring Agri-Logic Inc., of College Station, Texas, an agricultural consulting firm that is now under contract with the USDA's Risk Management Agency, to put the concept into a form that will pass muster in Congress.

Cost of production crop insurance is based on a policy of insuring farmers only for their actual and verifiable losses in a given region during a specific crop year. It would eliminate sweeping federal payment programs, which in the past led to massive payouts nationwide with little verification of an individual farmer's actual losses.

"The whole idea is to put the money where the actual loss occurred and help put the farmer who suffered the loss back on his feet so he can stay in farming," Odom said. "In the beginning we had to overcome some resistance to changing what had been carved in stone for decades. But we've broken through much of that resistance and farmers are beginning to see the wisdom of our plan."

Citizen's posse corralled alleged cattle rustler

A citizens' posse armed with cell phones corralled an alleged cattle rustler on the streets of Bossier City, Thursday, July 12.

When the drive shaft fell out of the tractor-trailer rig being driven by Mark Anthony Ganske, which he allegedly hijacked from a local livestock auction barn in the dead of night six hours earlier, his troubles had just begun.

As he ran through the streets of Bossier City in early morning rush-hour traffic, trying to make it to his get-away car parked only three blocks from the disabled cattle truck, a posse of determined citizens pinpointed Ganske's every move in a barrage of cell-phone calls to the Bossier City Police dispatcher.

As the dispatcher relayed the citizens' messages to fast closing police cruiser units, Ganske dashed into an abandoned house, police said. (cont'd on p.6)

What began with Ganske leveling a .45-caliber semi-automatic pistol at cattle truck driver John Patterson, binding and blindfolding him at 1:30 a.m., ended around 7 a.m. with Bossier City Police extracting Ganske from the attic of the abandoned house.

After unloading the stolen cattle in a makeshift pen in a Texas pasture, Ganske and the still immobilized Patterson returned to Louisiana, according to police. When the drive shaft hit the pavement in Bossier City it sent up a shower of sparks catching the eye of citizens. After Ganske got out of the truck, Patterson, who had worked the duct tape loose on his wrists during the round-trip ride to Texas, locked the doors of the truck and laid on the air horn alerting citizens to his predicament.

As Ganske bolted down the street, Patterson hopped out of the truck with his feet still bound, shouting to the gathering crowd that he had been robbed.

"This has been one of the stranger ones law enforcement personnel with the department's Livestock Brand Commission have ever been involved in," said Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Bob Odom.

"It's a real tribute to the citizens who were willing to get involved by assisting in the capture of this individual," Odom said.

"Bringing Ganske in was a real team effort among law enforcement officials in two states," Odom added. "The Bossier City Police, the department's Carney Burcham, who is continuing the investigation into the case, Bullard (Texas) City Police Chief Gary Lewis who, acting on a tip, located the cattle, and investigators Jimmy Dickson and Mike Strong with the Texas Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, who recovered the cattle, enabled us to wrap up this case so quickly and so convincingly," he said.

Booked with aggravated kidnapping, armed robbery and theft of 51 head of livestock, Ganske, 31, Rt. 2, Box 242, Jacksonville, Texas, is in the Bossier Parish Jail on a $200,000 bond. He was on probation at the time of his arrest for a previous conviction for livestock theft in Texas.

The bizarre string of events began when Patterson happened to be the first driver of four trucks to load his cargo of cattle at 1:30 a.m. at Livestock Producers Sale Barn in Bossier City. When auction barn personnel turned their attention to the other trucks, investigators said, Ganske allegedly approached Patterson with a .45 semi automatic pistol.

With the pistol on Patterson, Ganske forced Patterson into the truck, blind folded him and duct taped his hands and feet.

Ganske pulled out of the parking lot on a 120-mile drive along I-20 to a remote pasture off Texas Highway 135 between Troup and Jacksonville. Several times, Patterson told investigators, Ganske told Patterson not to give him any trouble or he would shoot him.

Jockeying the truck in the pasture for unloading, Ganske ran over several fence posts which investigators suspect led to the damage that eventually caused the drive shaft to fall out.

"Ganske neglected to provide water in the holding pen in Texas," Livestock Brand Investigator Burcham said. "When I got there the cattle had pushed down the fence looking for water and all but two were found in the pastures of nearby ranchers. We are still looking for the other two animals."

Ganske left a long trail of evidence, Burcham said. Each animal going through a livestock auction has a tag glued to its backside with a unique number particular to Louisiana, the individual auction barn, and the animal. "We found tags left in the truck and on the ground in the pasture. There were glue marks on the recovered cattle and four animals still had the tags on their backsides. He was unloading the cattle in the pitch dark and he left us some beautiful evidence," Burcham said.

Investigators feel Ganske was aided by at least two other persons in the commission of the alleged crime, Burcham said. Information has been received linking him to other offenses in Texas and Louisiana. "We are asking for the public's assistance. They can call the Department of Agriculture's Crime- stoppers line at 1-800-558-9741 or their local crimestoppers line."

Eggs are good for you and can be an important part of an active person's diet. Eggs are nutrient dense, low in calories and contain 13 vitamins and minerals. The latest scientific research shows that eating foods with cholesterol, such as eggs, does not significantly increase blood cholesterol levels in most people. Egg whites contain no cholesterol or fat and only about 20% of the yolk's fat content is saturated. One large egg contains only about 75 calories, a medium egg about 66, an extra-large about 84 and a jumbo egg about 94 calories.
